

October 20, 2004

To: Federal Communications Commission
From: Earlene R. McNair

This comment is concerning your proposed expansion of Low Power FM (LPFM) stations, which may result on them taking over current FM translator services. I am a proud supporter of K-LOVE on 90.7. In this society where the 1st amendment and Freedom of Speech has reached an extreme level, it is refreshing to hear at least one proponent of positive, encouraging, and family-friendly music and messages. As the guardian of the airways, it would be nice to do the public a service and make sure a family-friendly station, such as K-LOVE, is not threatened. If you look at the percentages of family-friendly versus un-family-friendly stations, I am sure you would see a lopsided picture. In communities across America, we need a station that supports wholesome values, gives encouragement, and promotes citizenship. As you know, this station is listener supported and receives no commercial advertisement. The mere fact that it is still operational must send you a strong signal. There are some listeners out there that want this type of station. In a world where advertisement reigns supreme, it is refreshing to know that a station can really survive without it. If this proposal passes, you may say that it will not impact the entire K-LOVE community. Well, I say if it impacts one K-LOVE station that it impacts us all.

From a fellow United States citizen and supporter of the United States Constitution, please reconsider your proposal.